Montana's Stock Farm

Why we keep coming back.

In 1999 Co-founder, Charles Schwab took the ceremonial first drive on the Club's Tom Fazio Championship Golf Course. To this day people haven't stopped talking about Stock Farm. It's one of those places that gets better with age. Over the years, the Club has consistently received top billing from the national media. This year alone, Stock Farm was the only golf club in the Northern Rockies that ranked among the Top 100 Most Prestigious Private Clubs in America in Golf Connoisseur. Stock Farm was also one of only two golf communities in this region that ranked in Luxury Golf and Travel's Top 25 Private Golf Communities.

A course that was designed to grow

As is his meticulous and visionary style, it was no mistake that in the initial phases of design, Tom Fazio created the Stock Farm course to look and feel as though it had been there for years. His routing took full advantage of the diverse terrain – the prairie slopes, clusters of Ponderosa pines, and hidden cart paths that weave under natural rock outcropping and traverse an authentic trestle bridge. Just as Fazio planned years earlier, the course has grown and flourished, the rough has matured, and members' golf games continue to evolve.

Hole 13, just one example of Fazio's incredible foresight in design.

A grand tradition in its own right

It's no wonder this exquisite course and this stunning collection of hand-crafted log homes and beautiful ranch houses continues to draw golf enthusiasts and those who write about them to Montana's Bitterroot Valley. Even today a fortunate few have the opportunity to become part of the Stock Farm tradition. There are a limited number of Mountain Home properties beautifully situated among the pines overlooking the valley below as well as a handful of fully furnished cabins available.

Stock Farm's precedent for grandeur was set by copper king Marcus Daly, who built the original Bitter Root Stock Farm near Hamilton, Montana in the late 1800s. Today's Stock Farm is rooted in well-established traditions, yet it maintains a youthful momentum of a club that just turned the trowel.

They catch them big on the nearby Bitterroot River.

Eat, sleep and breathe Montana

It must be the freshness of those Montana mornings, or the ever-changing menu from the club's world-class culinary artist familiarly known as Chef Toby that make each day at Stock Farm feel new again. Not only can members discover the nuances of the golf course with each round they play, they also have endless access to Montana's glorious Bitterroot Valley, including 75 miles of world-class fly-fishing, incredible on-site elk viewing, and even sky-diving for the daredevils in the bunch. Yes, Stock Farm has certainly grown up. Just as the vision has represented well in reality, the Club will continue to prosper. Select homesites are available.
